Micheelson, Captaine Cornelis Veyelson, Captaine Cleinsorghe and others,
the 7. day of October 1602.

He Admirall, wherein was

Don Fredrico Spinola called
S. Loys, was cast away before Schouen, being driuen thither by the winds and tempestuous weather, wherewith Captain Derrick Clein- sorghe of Amsterdam med-

led not, in whose ship the Commissarie Henrick Ioa- chimson was, as I wrote vnto you yesterday. The Committer Gual. that is, the Treasurer called Cardina- lin, was Captaine commander of the slaues and other footmen. Captaine Cascales Danila a Spaniard, was also in this Galley with a company of souldiers.

The Vice-admirall, called Vergas, was in the Galley called the S. John: the Committees Generall of Victuals and Munition was therein also, with Captaine Gasper de Sossioquere a Portingale, with a company of Portingales, and Captaine Mattheo Rondon with another companie. This Vice-admirall, with the Galley called S. Jacento, hereafter mentioned, reported to be cast away on the Flemmish Coast, wit, the one vpon the Splinters, and the other to the Eastward of Newport. Some report that they saw them so lost without any further particularities.

The Galley called Padillo (the Capitaine of this Galley was named Hosso) wherein was a Colonell called Don Iohn de Menese a Portingale: the Auditor, and Secretarie of Spinola were also therein, but as Bluet they went out of the said Galley, and went into the Galley called Lucero, which is by interpretation the Morning Starre. This Galley the Morning Starre Capitaine Hartman stemmed and sunke. In the Galley the Padillo was the Capitaine Bartholomaeus d' Oliueres, with a companie of Portingales. And in the Morning Starre was Capitaine Lucens also a Portingale, and had with him a companie. And the Lieutenant of the Colonell called Matheo Ruela, with the Sergeant Maior called Iohn de Payna. Capitaine Mol stemmed and sunke this Galley the Padillo, and was the second which was fought with and drowned. Lucero or the Morning Starre was stemmed by Hartman, and first of all drowned. The Capitaine of this Galley was called Collado, whose legges were both shot off, and afterwards died in Hartmans ship.

The Galley called the S. Philippo, was stemmed by Capitaine Cerrit Euertson Oly, wherein were no chiefe officers of the souldiers, but Capitaine Rouy Mendos with his companie, the said Capitaine being dead. The Capitaine of this Galley was called Don Rodrigo de Narroys, and was ouersailed by Cerrit Euertson Oly, and was the third that was encountred and drowned.

The

The Galley called S. Jacento had no chiefe Commanders in her, but onely of the souldiers, to wit, Captaine Loys de Camons a Portingale, with a compagnie of souldiers.

John Vidal a Spaniard died of sicknes in the Capo Finis Terre, who had also a companie in some of the said Gallies, with another Captaine and his companie, whose names I could not learne: so that they were in all nine Companies, to wit, two Companies of Castilians, and seuen Companies of Portingales, which were esteemed to be 900. strong. The porters, or slaues which rowed, were in all about threene hundred persons, and of the one and other were saued as after followeth.

Euery Galley had three brasse peeces, as the cast peeces which were demy Cannons, or Culuerings, and in the two wings on both sides smaller peeces, and no more Ordinance.

Captaine Gerrit Euerts saued some 80. men, to wit, 35. or 36. slaues, the rest were officers & souldiers.

Captaine Mol saued 49. men, among whom were five or sixe souldiers, the rest were slaues.

Captaine Hartman saued 42. persons, among whom were also five or sixe souldiers.

The Admirall S. Loys (before named) was said to driuen ashore on the land of Schowen, neere to Wick Sea, and was supposed there to haue perished, because some of the Oares and other baggage there found floating in the Sea: but since it is said it got thence, and put into Callis, where the Governor attached the lading, and set the slaues at libertie.
